Heart Sunday is Coming

UNCLE SAM: "ON HEART SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 24, GIVE FOR EVERY HEART YOU LOVE."

Sarah Anne's COOKING CLASS

The maker of good soups, after all, is an artist in flavor. She blends various stocks and vegetables and turns the contents of various cans into the saucepan and pulls out an undreamed of surprise.

With a cold main course or with sandwiches, hot soup complements the meal and strikes a proper digestive balance.

Queen's Soup

1 fricasee fowl
1 onion
Water
6 blanched almonds
Salt and pepper
2 eggs beaten
1-2 cup cooked rice
Croutons
Grated cheese

Clean and cut up fowl and cook in with the onion in water to cover, until chicken is tender. Strain.

Put the almonds and enough white meat from the fowl to make 1 cup through the food chopper twice using the finest knife. While grinding, add the rice.

Return this mixture to the soup, season, bring slowly to simmering point and slightly thicken with the beaten eggs first pouring a little soup over them. Be careful that the soup does not boil, after eggs are added. Put a few croutons into each portion when serving and pass grated cheese.

Italian Onion Soup

2 large onions
2 tablespoons butter
2 sprigs parsley
6 cups rice beef stock

Slice the onions thinly and cook to a goldan brown in the butter, add the parsley and beef stock. Bring to the boiling point, simmer 15 minutes and season to taste with salt and pepper and paprika.

Serve in soup plates, placing a slice of crisp, well-toasted bread, dried in the oven, in each. Scatter Parmesean cheese thickly over the surface of the soup and pass a dish of cheese at the table.

Bean Soup

1 lb. dried lima beans
Ham bone
3 onions
12 peppercorns
1-2 half bay leaf
6 to 8 cups water
1 cup minced carrot
1-2 cup minced green pepper
1 small can tomatoes

Soak the beans 1 hour or more. Put the ham bone, the beans, onions, pepeprcorns and 1-2 bay leaf into 6 or 8 cups of water. Cook slowly until the beans are tender. 2 or more hours. Reserve 1 1-2 cups of whole beans.

Force the remaining beans and stock through a sieve. Return the whole beans to the stock, add the minced carrot, green pepper and tomatoes. Cook until tender.

If there are bits of ham adhering to the bone, mince and add to the soup.

This soup with croutons or bread is sufficient for a dinner with a green salad and a light dessert.

Clear Vegetable Soup

4 cups canned bouillon
2 cups tomato juice
1-2 cup diced carrots
2 teaspoons chopped onion
1-2 cup diced turnip
1-2 cup diced celery
1-2 cup canned peas
1 tablespoon catsup
1-2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Combine all ingredients and allow to cook slowly until vegetables are tender.

Jellied Bouillon

2 tablespoos gelatin
4 tablespoons cold water
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons parsley
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons tarragon vinegar
4 cubes beef bouillon, dissolved in 4 cups hot water
2 small pieces bay leaf

Soak the gelatin in cold water 5 minutes.

Cook the remaining ingredients for 10 minutes. Strain and add the gelatin to the hot mixture. Stir. Cut in small cubes and serve in bouillon cups with slice of lemon.

MEAT SUPPLIES AMPLE

Homemakers Items

Winter Vacation?

If the family is planning a winter vacation, why not pack the whole family's overnight clothes in one suitcase, so that when stopping for the night, only one bag will have to be carried in? When packing the car for the trip, put the things you won't use along the way in the trunk, and keep only bags which contain traveling clothes in the front.

Another idea for the trip is to hang a shoebag over the back of the front car seat for the small items which get strewn all over the car. And keep in mind that plastic bags are handy for packing spillable articles on a trip and for bringing home wet wash cloths or wet diapers.

Force Branches For Early Blooms

Impatient for spring to come?

You can bring a hint of spring into your home by forcing some of the early flowering trees and shrubs into bloom during late February and March.

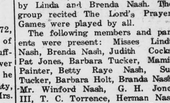
Here's how, as outlined by A. S. Beecher, associate horticulturist at V. P. I.:

Select branches from trees or shrubs that normally bloom early, and be sure the branches are well supplied with flower buds. Place the branches in a jar of water in a cool room. After the buds swell, move them into a room at ordinary room temperature. Many of the easily forced branches, such as forsythia, can be placed at ordinary room temperature from the start. Quicker results can be obtained by immersing the branches in warm water for 10 to 15 minutes when they are first brought into the house. Syringing the branches every day with water will help hasten the swelling of buds. Recut the stem ends and change the water occasionally.

Branches that can be forced easily into bloom for their flowers include flowering quince, forsythia, winter jasmine, spirea, cornelian cherry, redbud, winter or fragnant honeysuckle, shadblow, star magnolia, and virburnums.

Branches which can be forced early for attractive leaves or catkins include hazelnut, alder, pussywillow, currant, birch, red maple, oaks, beeches, poplars, and mountain ash.

More difficult to force are flowering dogwood, bladdernut, mockorange, lilacs, and various fruit trees such as cherry, plum, apple, and pear.



Warner Brothers has started the movie version of "The Pajama Game," — the first thorough-going musical at Warner since Doris Day romped through "Lucky Me," with Phil Silvers in 1954. Doris, by the way, is the only familiar face in the company — the others were recruited from New York, where the show has been a sizzler for almost three yeas.

The filmed television budget in 1957 is expected to soar to somewhere around $90,000,000. The Lucille Ball - Desi Arnaz Company alone is expected to spend more than $15,500,000, with Walt Disney and Warner Brothers in second and third places, respectively, for TV expenditures.

Anthony (better known as Tony) Franciosa is a young man to watch. He hit the Broadway lights with Shelley Winters in "A Hatful of Rain" and that started the Hollywood offers. Hal Willis signed him for a picture a year, MGM wanted him to star in "The Vintage," but he passed that and a European trip to work for Elia Kazan in "A Face in The Crowd," and now he's appearing with Jean Simmons and Paul Douglas in "This Could Be The Night." It all happens at once it seems.

Ginger Rogers is said to be seriously considering playing a TV actress in a filmed TV series, titled "Love That Channel," for CBS.

Jean Simmons and Paul Newman are set to co-star in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's adaptation of the James A. Michener story, "Until They Sail." Filming is set to begin next month.

FARM MACHINERY CHANGES NOTED

There are some fancy goings-on in the farm machinery field these days.

Stanley S. Smith, assistant agricultural engineer at VPI, says the past few years have seen many changes and new developments in farm machinery.

For instance, when today's farmer goes to buy a tractor he finds more power with a wider range of extras, such as fachometers, power steering, more gears with a wider range of speeds, new hitches with built-in mechanical and hydraulic draft-control devices, power-adjusted wheels, wider-base tires, more safety devices, and a wider choice of engines for various fuels.

In the tillage tool line, there are more mounted tools, larger plows with greater beam clearances, two way disc plows, and power-driven cultivators which operate on much the same principle as the rotor-spader.

Seeding and fertilizer equipment features new manure spreaders with larger and lower bodies and heavy-duty unloading mechanisms. One manufacturer has recently announced a new front-delivery-type spreader.

More equipment is available for applying liquid fertilizer. There are new improved high-speed planters and drills for use at higher tractor speeds, and more manufacturers are offering hand-type pasture seeders.

In harvesting equipment there are new mowers, some with short pitmans, others with no pitmans, featuring easier hookups, less vibration and a greater range of mowing heights. New high-speed rakes have improved hitches. More companies are manufacturing hay conditioners or crushers for speeding up the drying of hay.

New balers, some self-propelled, and others with all prelubricated bearings, require no greasing. The manufacturers are making corn headers for their self-propelled combines. Prospects are good for the use of the peanut combine in Virginia when used in combination with a crop drier.

More farmers are using elevators for handling hay and grain, tractor loaders for loading manure and feeding ensilage. More combines are being sold with grain tanks. Wider use is being made of automatic silo unloaders and conveyor-type feed trough.

With the continual development of insecticides and pesticides more farmers are finding it necessary to invest in crop sprayers, most of them of the tractor-mounted type.

About The Home

By Frances Dell

We are certainly at the height of the soup season. The soup kettle, in most American homes has given way to the can of bought soup. Although there are many fine canned soups, it is hard to beat a bowl of "home made" vegetable soup.

Besides, if you want to save money and at the same time, serve tastier meals, preparing old-fashioned soup is one way to do this.

If you are interesting in saving money on your food budget, you can have soup once a week. Save meat stock. Add to it the bones from chicken or any fowl, chop bones, roast bones, and other meat bones. Also, any water from cooking vegetables.

Cook this mixture down until it is rich and flavorful. It can be used as a base, not only for soups but stews and cooking vegetables.

This stock pot should be boiled up once a day. In the old days a great grandmother kept a stock pot going on the back of the stove all the time.

It is possible to make an excellent stock with 2 pounds of shin meat with bone. Add a beef bone and for extra flavor a veal or beef knuckle. The knuckle is filled with gelatin and adds both texture and flavor.

There are endless varieties of soup. Some are perfect served before a meal. Some are cold, thin or thick. A favorite for this season is the "all-in-one" soup. This soup is made with vegetables and good stew meat. It is thick and nourishing and needs only bread, salad, and a dessert to accompany it to be a luncheon fit for a king or any "hard-to-please" husband.

IN FASHION NOW

In fashion now . . . a new look. The jackets are short—just as they were during the fall and winter. They end at the waistline or come as low as the hip line.

The short-jacket suits usually feature a soft easy fitting skirt. The longer jackets are belted. This new interest in belts has brought on a new crop of novel belts well worth mentioning — the gold chain necklace-belt, and the wrap-around belt. Try adding one of these to your old suit to give it a pick-up.

Necklines are coming in for a lot of attention. A good many necklaces on dresses and suits are opened up and filled with pearls, gold chains or crystal beads.

Spring and summer dresses sport touches of chiffon for all kinds of fanciful effects.

Shoes are more pointed than ever. Purses are small and neat-looking. The ever - popular big satchel is made quite sleek-looking.

Pink, as always for spring, is an important color. This may be because there is a shade of pink that is becoming to everyone.

The jacket dress is a good investment for the budget-minded lady.
